Amend the title so as to read:

A bill to direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to carry out a national project to prevent, diagnose, treat, and cure Parkinson’s, to be known as the National Parkinson’s Project, and for other purposes.

PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

H.R. 2365 requires the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to carry out a national project to prevent, diagnose, treat, and cure Parkinson’s disease and other neurodegenerative Parkinsonisms and related diseases, to be known as the National Parkinson’s Project. In carrying out the project, the Secretary must provide an annual assessment of the nation’s progress in preparing for and responding to the increased burden of Parkinson’s; provide information, facilitate collaboration, and encourage development of innovative approaches to prevent, diagnose, treat, and cure Parkinson’s and related diseases; and coordinate and avoid duplication of related research activities across involved entities; among other things. The bill also establishes an Advisory Council, comprised of federal and nonfederal stakeholders, to advise HHS on Parkinson’s-related issues, including providing an annual report outlining current activities, recommendations, and priority actions to improve efforts related to the prevention, diagnosis, treatment, and curing of Parkinson’s and related diseases. The provisions of the bill terminate at the end of calendar year 2035.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

It is estimated that Parkinson’s disease affects nearly 1 million people in the United States and more than 6 million people worldwide. It is the second most common neurological disease globally with nearly 90,000 new cases diagnosed every year. The cause of Parkinson’s remains largely unknown. While there is no cure, treatment options vary and include medications, lifestyle adjustments, and surgery.

The estimated total cost of Parkinson’s disease to individuals, families, and the United States government is estimated to be about $51.9 billion every year, with $25.4 billion attributable to direct medical costs (e.g., hospitalizations, medication) and $26.5 billion in non-medical costs like missed work, lost wages, early forced retirement, and family caregiver time. According to a recent study, the federal government spends nearly $25 billion annually in caring for people with Parkinson's. About $2 billion of that is shouldered by Social Security, and the remaining $23 billion is in Medicare costs.

H.R. 2365 would establish a National Plan to streamline and coordinate efforts to prevent, diagnose, treat, and cure Parkinson's and encourage development of innovative approaches for treatments and cures.
