SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Abstract

A census of agriculture is taken to obtain measures of agricultural activity and productivity for each county or county equivalent and state in the United States and the outlying areas.

The census of agriculture is conducted on the same 5-year cycle as the other economic censuses. The 1997 Census of Agriculture covers all agricultural operations in each state, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands which meet the census farm definition. The farm definition for the 1997 Census of Agriculture for the 50 states is any place that produced and sold, or normally would produce and sell, $1,000 or more of agricultural products during 1997. This is the identical definition used for the 1992 Census of Agriculture. The Commonwealth of Puerto Rico farm definition has been changed from the 1992 definition, and will be the same as the definition used in the United States. The farm definition for Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands will stay at its 1992 level of $100 in sales.

To minimize respondent burden, the Census Bureau limits the items asked on the report forms for all farms to just these basic subjects: land use and ownership, irrigated land, crop acreages and quantities harvested, livestock and poultry inventories and value of products sold, acres set aside under Federal acreage-reduction programs, payment for participation in Federal farm programs, the amount received from Commodity Credit Corporation loans, number of injuries and deaths, and operator characteristics. Additionally, 25 percent of the report forms include additional questions on number of hired farm workers, production expenses, fertilizer and chemicals, machinery and equipment, market value of land and buildings, and income from farm-related sources. The Census Bureau designs regionalized report forms that are tailored for various parts of the country and are specific to the crops grown in a farmer's particular area.

The census of agriculture is authorized by law under Title 13, United States Code, sections 142(a) and 191. Individual farm operators are guaranteed by this same law that their individual information will be kept confidential. The Census Bureau uses the information only for statistical purposes and publishes data only as tabulated totals. The census of agriculture is the only comprehensive source of agricultural statistics at the county level. These agricultural statistics are used by Congress in developing and changing farm programs. Many national and state programs are designed or allocated on the basis of census data such as funds for extension services, research, and soil conservation projects. Private industry uses census statistics to provide a more effective production and distribution system for the agricultural community.

II. Method of Collection

The 1997 Census of Agriculture for the United States and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico will be conducted primarily using mailout/mailback procedures for data collection. For Guam, the Virgin Islands, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands direct enumeration methods will be used for data collection.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Abstract

The Census Bureau is the preeminent collector and provider of timely, relevant, and quality data about the people and economy of the United States. Economic data are the Census Bureau's primary program commitment during nondecennial census years. The economic census, conducted under authority of Title 13, U.S.C., is the primary source of facts about the structure and functioning of the Nation's economy and features unique industry and geographic detail. Economic census statistics serve as part of the framework for the national accounts and provide essential information for government, business and the general public. The 1997 Economic Census will cover virtually every sector of the U.S. Economy.

The 1997 Commodity Flow Survey, a component of the Economic Census, will produce key statistics on the movement of freight in the United States. In the past, these types of data were used primarily by governmental agencies in planning for transportation infrastructure. Now these types of data are becoming increasingly important to the business sector for making decisions related to marketing and transportation strategies. The Commodity Flow Survey will be conducted with the guidance and co-sponsorship of the Bureau of Transportation Statistics, Department of Transportation. This survey will provide a range of transportation statistics including value of shipments, weight of shipments, commodities shipped, mode(s) of transportation used, origin and destination of shipments, ton-miles and average miles per shipment. The Census Bureau will publish shipment characteristics at the national, state, and National Transportation Analysis Region levels.

Primary strategies for reducing respondent burden in the Commodity Flow Survey include:

- Employing a stratified random sample to use the least number of establishments required to produce reliable statistics;
- Accepting estimates;
- Requesting data on a limited sample of shipments.

We will introduce additional strategies for reducing overall respondent burden for the 1997 Commodity Flow Survey, based on experience gained from the 1993 survey. These include:

- Decreasing the total sample size by nearly one half;
- Reducing the reporting period from two weeks to one week each quarter;
- Offering electronic reporting options.

II. Method of Collection

The Commodity Flow Survey will survey a sample of business establishments in mining, manufacturing, wholesale, and selected retail industries. Each selected establishment will receive, by mail, four questionnaires—one during each quarter of 1997. On each form, an establishment will be asked to report data for an average of 25 shipments, selected during a designated one-week reporting period.
