SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Abstract

The SPD is a household-based survey designed as a data collection vehicle that can provide the basis for an overall evaluation of how well welfare reforms are achieving the aims of the Administration and the Congress and meeting the needs of the American people.

The SPD is a large, longitudinal, nationally-representative study that measures participation in welfare programs, including both programs that are being reformed and those that remain unchanged. The SPD measures other important social, economic, demographic, and family changes that will allow analysis of the effectiveness of the welfare reforms.

With the August 22, 1996, signing of the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996 (Pub L. 104-193), the Census Bureau is required to conduct the SPD, using as the sample the households from the 1992 and 1993 Survey of Income and Program Participation (SIPP). The information obtained will be used to evaluate the impact of this law on a sample of previous welfare recipients and future recipients of assistance under new state programs funded under this law as well as assess the impact on other low-income families. Issues of particular attention include welfare dependency, the length of welfare spells, the causes of repeat welfare spells, educational enrollment and work training, health care utilization, out-of-wedlock births, and the status of children.

The 2001 SPD is the fourth year of data collection using the same core questions. The inclusion of an adolescent self-administered questionnaire is also planned. In the 2000 SPD, a one-time topical module collected the residential histories of children. The 1999 SPD collected core data plus extended measures of child well-being. The 1998 SPD included an adolescent self-administered questionnaire similar to the one planned for 2001. A bridge survey using the Current Population Survey March questionnaire was conducted in the spring of 1997 to provide a link to baseline data for the period prior to the implementation of the welfare reform activities.

II. Method of Collection

The SPD is a longitudinal study of welfare-related activities with the sample respondents originally selected from 1992 and 1993 SIPP panels. Interviews were conducted in 1997, 1998, 1999, and 2000. Subsequent data collections are scheduled for 2001 and 2002. Data are collected using a computer-assisted interviewing (CAI) instrument from a nationally representative sample of the noninstitutionalized resident population living in the United States for all individuals, families, and households. Individuals who are at least 15 years of age at the time of the interview will be eligible to be in the survey. A separate paper interview will be obtained for each adolescent member, ages 12+, of the sample households. The adolescent interview is administered either by audio cassette, while the adolescent records the answers in a paper answer booklet or by a field representative asking the questions using a paper questionnaire.

A small sample of households is scheduled for reinterview. The reinterview process assures that all households were properly contacted and that the data are valid.
