

of effective date as a result of our review of the public comments that we received on the January 4, 2001 physician self-referral final rule. As discussed above, we understand from those comments that, unless we delay the effective date of the last sentence of § 411.354(d)(1), hospitals, academic medical centers, and other entities will have to renegotiate numerous contracts for physician services, potentially causing significant disruption within the health care industry. We are concerned that the disruption could unnecessarily inconvenience Medicare beneficiaries or interfere with their medical care and treatment. Accordingly, we do not believe that it is in the public interest to offer yet another opportunity for public comment on essentially the same issue in the limited context of whether to delay this sentence of the regulation. In addition, given the imminence of the January 4, 2002 effective date, we find that seeking public comment on this delay in effective date would be impracticable because it would generate uncertainty regarding an imminent effective date. This uncertainty could cause health care providers to renegotiate thousands of contracts with physicians in an effort to comply with the regulation by January 4, 2002 if the proposed delay is not finalized until after the opportunity for public comment. Thus, providing the opportunity for public comment could result in the very disruption that this delay of effective date is intended to avoid.

[Docket No. NHTSA-98-4515; Notice 4]

RIN 2127-AI57

Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standards

AGENCY: National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), DOT.

ACTION: Response to petitions for reconsideration; final rule.

SUMMARY: This document responds to petitions for reconsideration of the Federal motor vehicle safety standard that addresses occupant crash safety issues exclusive to electric vehicles: electrolyte spillage and electrical shock protection. We are making clarifying amendments regarding the application of the standard, and regarding the test conditions for battery state of charge and electrical isolation. We are denying a petition to specify an alternative performance requirement for electrical isolation.

DATES: The final rule is effective December 1, 2001.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: For non-legal issues, contact Charles Hott, Office of Safety Performance Standards, NHTSA (202-366-0427). For legal issues, contact Taylor Vinson, Office of Chief Counsel, NHTSA (202-366-5263).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On September 27, 2000, the agency published a final rule establishing Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard No. 305 "Electric-powered vehicles: Electrolyte spillage and electrical shock protection" (65 FR 57980), effective October 1, 2001. On February 8, 2001, the effective date was delayed to December 1, 2001 (66 FR 9533).

Standard No. 305 applies to all electric vehicles (EVs) (except those covered by FMVSS No. 500 "Low-Speed Vehicles") that have a propulsion power source greater than 48 volts and a gross vehicle weight rating (GVWR) of 4536 kg (10,000 lbs) or less. The final rule was based on the Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) J1766 "Recommended Practice for Electric and Hybrid Electric Vehicle Battery Systems Crash Integrity Testing." The final rule contains provisions similar to those in the SAE recommended practice, with only those changes that were necessary to accommodate the regulatory text.

Standard No. 305 establishes performance criteria that must be met when an EV is subjected to the frontal impact test procedures of Standard No. 208 (including the 30-degree oblique impact test), the side impact test procedures of Standard No. 214, and the rear impact test procedure of Standard No. 301. No spillage of electrolyte into the occupant compartment is permitted. Electrolyte spillage outside the passenger compartment is limited to 5 liters for the 30-minute period after vehicle motion ceases, and throughout the post-crash rollover test. Battery modules must stay restrained in the vehicle without any component intruding into the occupant compartment. Electrical isolation between the chassis and high voltage system must be at least 500 ohms per nominal volt as determined by the SAE test procedure.

Petitions for Reconsideration

We received two petitions for reconsideration of Standard No. 305, one from General Motors Corporation (GM) and another from DaimlerChrysler Corporation (DC).

1. Petition Pertaining to S3, Application

GM believes that a change in the regulatory text of S3 Application is
