SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

Increasingly, patients seek to play an active role in their own healthcare. FDA believes that manufacturers providing patients with accurate, useable information about their healthcare (including the medical products they use and patient-specific information these products generate) will improve healthcare by empowering patients to participate fully with their healthcare providers in making sound medical decisions. For purposes of this guidance, patient-specific information is defined as any information unique to an individual patient or unique to that patient’s treatment or diagnosis that may be recorded, stored, processed, retrieved, and/or derived from a medical device. This information may include, but is not limited to, recorded patient data, device usage/output statistics, healthcare provider inputs, incidence of alarms, and/or records of device malfunctions or failures.

FDA developed this draft guidance to convey FDA’s policy regarding the dissemination of patient-specific information recorded, stored, processed, retrieved, and/or derived from a medical device and provided by the manufacturer to the patient who is either treated or diagnosed with that specific device. This draft guidance document also outlines considerations for the form in which this information is communicated to help to ensure clarity of content and appropriate context.

Manufacturers may share patient-specific information (recorded, stored, processed, retrieved, and/or derived from a medical device, consistent with the intended use of that medical device) with patients either on their own initiative or at the patient’s request, without obtaining additional premarket review before doing so. Any labeling, as that term is defined in section 201(m) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (the FD&C Act), that is provided to the patient by the manufacturer is subject to applicable requirements in the FD&C Act and FDA regulations.

II. Significance of Guidance

This draft guidance is being issued consistent with FDA’s good guidance practices regulation (21 CFR 10.115). The draft guidance when finalized will represent the current thinking of FDA on “Dissemination of Patient-Specific Information from Devices by Device Manufacturers.” It does not establish any rights for any person and is not binding on FDA or the public. You can use an alternative approach if it satisfies the requirements of the applicable statutes and regulations.

III. Electronic Access

Persons interested in obtaining a copy of the draft guidance may do so by downloading an electronic copy from the Internet. A search capability for all Center for Devices and Radiological Health guidance documents is available at <http://www.fda.gov/MedicalDevices/DeviceRegulationandGuidance/GuidanceDocuments/default.htm>. Guidance documents are also available at <http://www.regulations.gov>. Persons unable to download an electronic copy of “Dissemination of Patient-Specific Information from Devices by Device Manufacturers” may send an email request to CDRH-Guidance@fda.hhs.gov to receive an electronic copy of the document. Please use the document number 1500067 to identify the guidance you are requesting.

IV. Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995

This guidance refers to previously approved collections of information found in FDA regulations and guidance. These collections of information are subject to review by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 (44 U.S.C. 3501–3520). The collections of information in 21 CFR parts 801 and 809, regarding device labeling, are approved under OMB control number 0910–0485.
