

removed from Davidson, Little Muddy Creek, in Linn County, OR, by Dr. Wilbur A. Davis of Oregon State University, and C. Melvin Aikens and Otto E. Henrickson of the University of Oregon under a contract with the U.S. Department of the Interior. No known individuals were identified. The eight associated funerary objects are one dentalia purse, one bone whistle, one awl, one awl fragment, one spoon and handle, one bone tool, one animal claw, and one clay marble lot.

In 1972, human remains representing, at minimum, four individuals were removed from a site near Scio in Linn County, OR, by the OSU Anthropology Department. The burials were excavated at the request of the private landowner. One of the burials had been vandalized by the backhoe crew, but the other burials were intact and were excavated under controlled conditions. An estimated burial date sometime between A.D. 1845 and 1853 is based on associated burial objects and documented Euro-American settlement in the Scio area. Some of the items taken by the backhoe crew were transferred to the OSU Anthropology Department. No known individuals were identified. The 27 associated funerary objects are three lots of dentalia beads, two lots of shell fragments, two lots of metal fragments, two lots of copper tubes, one lot of decorated hide strips, one screw, one lot of metal bucket scraps, one gunflint, one metal hoop, one lot of glass beads, one lot of lithic flakes, one lithic core, one lot of nail fragments, one worked wood wedge, one lot of flat triangular copper pendants, one ran pendant, one ran, one lot of musket balls, one lot of wood firearm fragments, one lot of cloth and hide fragments, one lot of wax casts from burials, and one lot of buttons.

In June of 1955, human remains representing, at minimum, two individuals were removed from a site near Tangent in Linn County, OR, by amateur excavators. At an unknown date the human remains were transferred to the Oregon State Police (OSP), along with information concerning the approximate date and location of the excavations. In September of 1989, the OSU Anthropology Department received the ancestral human remains from the Oregon State Police. No known individuals were identified. The one associated funerary object is an obsidian flake.
