Description

In 1936 and 1937, human remains representing, at minimum, 33 individuals, were removed from Nateneten or NaLtene'ten, also known as Lone Ranch Creek Shell Mound (35CU37), an Athabaskan village, burial ground, and midden, in Curry County, OR. It is unknown when the site was first used, but radiocarbon dates of 280±60 RYBP and 1010±80 RYBP are consistent with a late occupation, and excavations from the 1930s report no Euroamerican items from the site. No Euroamerican materials were found with the burials. The human remains were removed by J. Berreman of Stanford University and later transferred to the University of Oregon Museum of Natural and Cultural History. Skeletal analyses indicate that the often fragmentary and partial human remains belong to six juveniles, 19 young adult and adult females, seven young adult and adult males, and one adult of indeterminate sex. No known individuals were identified. The 1,061 associated objects include 20 shell ornaments, 987 olivella shell beads, three stone and clay pipes, 14 bone pendants also known as "head scratchers," one net sinker, one wedge, one possible gaming piece, 21 clam shells, three fish vertebrae, one pigment specimen, four stone projectile points, and five other bone and shell artifacts.

In 1936 and 1937, human remains representing, at minimum, two individuals, were removed from the Rainbow Rock locality (35CU37a), about a mile south of Nateneten or NaLtene'ten, in Curry County, OR. There is no further provenience information, which is described as "two small shell deposits on the sloping hillside above Rainbow Rock . . . about 100 yards from the beach." The human remains were removed by J. Berreman of Stanford University and later transferred to the University of Oregon Museum of Natural and Cultural History. Skeletal analyses indicate that the human remains belong to two adult males. No known individuals were identified. No associated funerary objects are present.

In 1952, human remains representing, at minimum, two individuals, were removed by a private party from the surface of the south bank of the Chetco River, in Curry County, OR. There is no further provenience information. Skeletal analyses indicate that the fragmentary human remains represent two adults of indeterminate sex. No known individuals were identified. No associated funerary objects are present.

Historical Documents, ethnographic sources, and oral history indicate that Chetco people have occupied this area of the southern Oregon coast since pre-contact times. Based on archeological context and/or skeletal evidence, the individuals described above were determined to be Native American, of possible Chetco cultural affiliation.

The human remains and associated funerary objects in this notice are connected to one or more identifiable earlier groups, tribes, peoples, or cultures.
