SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Abstract

The SAID Program is one of many voluntary geographic partnership programs that collects data to update the U.S. Census Bureau's geographic database, known as the Master Address File/Topologically Integrated Geographic Encoding and Referencing (MAF/TIGER) System. The Census Bureau uses the MAF/TIGER System to link statistical data from censuses and surveys to locations and areas, such as American Indian reservations, states, counties, incorporated places, and census tracts. To tabulate census and survey response data properly, the Census Bureau must have current and accurate addresses, street centerlines, and imagery.

The SAID Program provides the Census Bureau with a continuous method to obtain current, accurate, and complete addresses, street centerlines, and imagery data from tribal, state, and local governments as well as other federal agencies and authoritative data source organizations. The purpose of the SAID Program is to help maintain the Census Bureau's geographic framework for data collection, tabulation, and dissemination between decennial censuses and to support ongoing programs such as the American Community Survey and the Population Estimates Program. The SAID Program will continue to focus on acquiring addresses, street centerlines, and imagery in areas targeted with housing unit growth or change.

The Census Bureau is requesting clearance to continue the SAID Program. As the current OMB Control Number 0607–1008 clearance will expire in January 2025, the new clearance will allow the Census Bureau to continue data acquisition to support MAF/TIGER System updates, quality control, and change detection.

II. Method of Collection

The SAID Program participant universe is determined annually using several evaluation factors. These factors include address growth, address change, or address coverage needs where there is no online address, parcel, or GIS data, and imagery coverage needs. The Census Bureau will contact potential participants by telephone and email to request data, and supporting metadata, for addresses, street centerlines, and/or imagery that are no more than two years old. The Census Bureau will attempt to contact each potential participant three times before rescheduling them for another year.

The Census Bureau may request entire datasets or partial datasets that include only the changes since a previous submission. For participants that agree to provide their data, the Census Bureau will provide guidance for using a secure online data sharing portal. The portal guides participants through the process for securely uploading their data to the Census Bureau and provides the Census Bureau with submission tracking for records management. If a participant's data lacks metadata or if the metadata is insufficient, the Census Bureau will contact the participant to request the additional metadata information. The Census Bureau will only process the data with appropriate metadata.

The data collected in the SAID Program may be used to maintain the Census Bureau's geographic framework for data collection, tabulation, and dissemination to support ongoing programs such as the American Community Survey, population estimates programs, other current surveys, and the decennial census. The SAID Program follows the process below:

- The Census Bureau invites participants, including tribal, state, and local governments; federal agencies; and other authoritative data source organizations each fiscal year.

- Participants are asked to provide a current address list with latitude/longitude coordinates and attributes, street centerline, and/or imagery data, and the associated metadata, for their jurisdiction that is no more than two years old.

- Participants submit the requested data per Census Bureau procedures.

- The Census Bureau validates then updates the MAF/TIGER System with the address and street centerline data provided by participants and uses the imagery for quality control and change detection.

- The Census Bureau uses the updated addresses and street centerlines in the MAF/TIGER System to support Census Bureau data collection, processing, and tabulation.

The Census Bureau is adding a feedback component to its geographic partnership programs to allow for the solicitation of feedback to improve the administration of the respective program and potentially reduce the future burden. Participants may be asked to provide their feedback on materials, method(s) of data collection, manner of communications, and the usability of the program applications and tools.
