

250,000 deposit accounts, or $20 billion in total assets.³² In 2017, the FDIC adopted 12 CFR part 370 to implement additional measures to ensure prompt and accurate payment of deposit insurance to depositors of the larger IDIs that qualify as covered institutions.³³

The FDIC generally relies on the failed IDI's deposit account records to identify deposit owners and the right and capacity in which deposits are insured.³⁴ Section 7(a)(9) of the FDI Act authorizes the FDIC to take action as necessary to ensure that each IDI maintains, and the FDIC receives on a regular basis from such IDI, information on the total amount of all insured deposits and uninsured deposits at the IDI.³⁵ Part 370 generally requires covered institutions to maintain complete and accurate records regarding the ownership and insurability of deposits (except as otherwise provided) and to have an information technology system that can be used to calculate deposit insurance coverage in the event of failure. These capabilities would facilitate the FDIC's prompt payment of deposit insurance and enhance the FDIC's ability to implement the least costly resolution of these covered institutions.

H. Deposit Liabilities on Other Data Collections

Certain institutions report information on deposit liabilities through other information collections, including the Complex Institution Liquidity Monitoring Report (FR 2052a), Report of Deposits and Vault Cash (FR 2900), the Systemic Risk Report (FR Y-15), and the Weekly Report of Selected Assets and Liabilities of Domestically Chartered Commercial Banks and U.S. Branches and Agencies of Foreign Banks (FR 2644). However, reporting requirements for most of these data collections are limited to the largest institutions or a subset of all IDIs. In most cases, the granularity of the data collected on deposits in these reports may also be limited in informing the efforts herein.
