Abstract of Information Available

Based on the information available, human remains representing, at least, one individual have been reasonably identified. No associated funerary objects are present. Human remains of one individual were discovered and removed from the Strickland Wash area (Chino Valley Ranger District, Yavapai County, Arizona) and turned into the Prescott National Forest on August 31, 2017. PNF Staff traveled to the discovery location and recorded this location as a new site, AR-03-09-01-1533. No other human remains were located. AR-03-09-01-1533 is a Prescott Culture site located on a terrace above Strickland Wash. The site contains a rock feature, a depression, and a dense artifact scatter of lithics, ceramics, and ground stone fragments. The human remains are currently secured in a safe location away from public view at the Sharlot Hall Museum, Prescott, Arizona.
