UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

BRITTANY MORRISON, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated,

Plaintiff,

v.

YIPPEE ENTERTAINMENT, INC.,

Defendant.

Case No. 24-cv-0797-MMA-KSC

ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT’S MOTION TO COMPEL
ARBITRATION

[Doc. No. 13]

Defendant Yippee Entertainment, Inc. (“Defendant” or “Yippee”) filed the instant motion to compel arbitration on July 17, 2024. Doc No. 13.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff filed a response in opposition, to which Defendant replied. Doc. Nos. 16–17. The Court found this matter suitable for determination on the papers and without oral argument pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 78(b) and Civil Local Rule 7.1.d.1. See Doc. No. 19. For the reasons set forth below, the Court DENIES Defendant’s motion to compel arbitration.

1 I. BACKGROUND

2 Defendant is a corporation that operates Yippee TV—a faith-based video 3 streaming service accessible through either a web browser or mobile application. Doc.
4 No 1. (“Compl.”) ¶¶ 4, 9, 18. To access Yippee TV, users are required to purchase a 5 subscription at either $8.00 per month or $49.00 per year. Id. ¶ 22. Plaintiff is one such 6 user, who created an account and purchased a subscription to Yippee TV from her web 7 browser in or around September 2023. Id. ¶ 61.

8 Defendant utilizes an “application programming interface (‘API’)” on its website 9 and app, Segment API, which “collect[s] and connect[s] data from other tools and 10 aggregat[es] the data to monitor performance, inform decision-making processes, and 11 create uniquely customized user experiences.” Id. ¶ 33. “Defendant utilizes each and 12 every one of these features of the Segment API in the [a]pp and sends their consumers’ 13 [personally identifiable information (‘PII’)] to Twilio,” a “customer engagement 14 platform” that owns and operates Segment API, when a user views a video through 15 Defendant’s service. Id. ¶¶ 28, 30, 32, 34. This PII includes “(i) a user’s full name (ii) a 16 user’s email address; (iii) a user’s Segment ID; (iv) the video ID for the specific video 17 viewed by the user; and (vi) the video title.” Id. ¶ 30. Defendant thus, according to 18 Plaintiff, “intentionally and knowingly” discloses PII to Twilio. Id. ¶ 44.

19 With this PII, Twilio uses Segment API to “analyze [a]pp data and marketing 20 campaigns, conduct targeted advertising, and ultimately boost Defendant’s revenue from 21 its marketing campaigns.” Id. ¶ 48. This includes creating “‘unified customer profiles’ 22 by ‘tak[ing] event data from across devices and channels and intelligently merg[ing] it 23 into complete user- or account-level profiles.’” Id. ¶ 49. Defendant also discloses users’ 24 PII to Twilio so it can better target marketing campaigns. Id. ¶ 54. After Defendant 25 discloses users’ PII, Twilio compiles and transmits that information to other third parties 26 that Defendant utilizes for targeted advertising.” Id. ¶ 56.

27 Here, with her subscription, Plaintiff used a web browser to regularly play 28 Defendant’s pre-recorded videos for herself and her children between around September

1 2023 until February 2024. Id. ¶¶ 61–2. During that period, she alleges, “each time [she] 2 accessed a video . . . Defendant disclosed her PII to Twilio via the Segment API.” Id.
3 ¶ 65. “Using this information, Twilio was able to identify Plaintiff [] and attribute her 4 video viewing records to an individualized profile of [her] in its databases.” Id. ¶ 66.
5 Plaintiff, however, never authorized Defendant to disclose her PII. Id. ¶ 63. In March 6 2024, Plaintiff’s counsel retained a “private research company” to conduct a “dynamic 7 analysis” of Defendant’s app, which records transmissions that occur from a user’s 8 device. Id. ¶¶ 24. Through that company, Plaintiff’s counsel became aware that 9 Defendant disclosed the described information to a third party through Segment API. Id.
10 ¶¶ 25–26. As a result, Plaintiff alleges a single cause of action for violation of the Video 11 Privacy Protection Act, 18 U.S.C. § 2710. Id. ¶¶ 74–82.

12 II. LEGAL STANDARD

13 The Federal Arbitration Act (“FAA”) permits “[a] party aggrieved by the alleged 14 failure, neglect, or refusal of another to arbitrate under a written agreement for arbitration
15 [to] petition any United States District Court . . . for an order directing that . . . arbitration 16 proceed in the manner provided for in [the arbitration] agreement.” 9 U.S.C. § 4. Upon a 17 showing that a party has failed to comply with a valid arbitration agreement, the district 18 court must issue an order compelling arbitration. Id. The Supreme Court has stated that 19 the FAA espouses a general policy favoring arbitration agreements. AT & T Mobility v.
20 Concepcion, 563 U.S. 333, 339 (2011). Federal courts are required to rigorously enforce 21 an agreement to arbitrate. See id. Courts are also directed to resolve any “ambiguities as 22 to the scope of the arbitration clause itself . . . in favor of arbitration.” Volt Info. Scis., 23 Inc. v. Bd. of Trs. of Leland Stanford Jr. Univ., 489 U.S. 468, 476–77 (1989).

24 In determining whether to compel a party to arbitrate, the Court may not review the 25 merits of the dispute; rather, the Court’s role under the FAA is limited “to determining 26 (1) whether a valid agreement to arbitrate exists and, if it does, (2) whether the agreement 27 encompasses the dispute at issue.” Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp., 533 F.3d 1114, 1119 28 (9th Cir. 2008) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). If the Court finds that the

1 answers to those questions are “yes,” the Court must compel arbitration. See Dean Witter
2 Reynolds, Inc. v. Byrd, 470 U.S. 213, 218 (1985). If there is a genuine dispute of material 3 fact as to any of these queries, a district court should apply a “standard similar to the 4 summary judgment standard of [Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56].” Concat LP v.
5 Unilever, PLC, 350 F. Supp. 2d 796, 804 (N.D. Cal. 2004).

6 Agreements to arbitrate are “valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such 7 grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract.” 9 U.S.C. § 2.
8 Courts must apply ordinary state law principles in determining whether to invalidate an 9 agreement to arbitrate. Ferguson v. Countrywide Credit Indus., 298 F.3d 778, 782 (9th 10 Cir. 2002). As such, arbitration agreements may be invalidated by generally applicable 11 contract defenses, such as fraud, duress, or unconscionability. Concepcion, 563 U.S. at 12 339–41.

13 III. DISCUSSION

14 Here, all contentions between the parties are premised on one issue: whether, when 15 Plaintiff subscribed to Yippee TV, she agreed to the Vimeo OTT Viewer Terms of 16 Service (“Vimeo Terms of Service”) such that she is bound by its terms. Doc. No. 13-1 17 at 7; Doc. No. 16 at 8. These terms, according to Defendant, contain a mandatory 18 arbitration clause. Doc. No. 13-1 at 11.

19 “In determining whether a valid arbitration agreement exists, federal courts “apply 20 ordinary state-law principles that govern the formation of contracts.” Nguyen v. Barnes 21 & Noble Inc., 763 F.3d 1171, 1175 (9th Cir. 2014) (citing First Options of Chicago, Inc.
22 v. Kaplan, 514 U.S. 938, 944 (1995)). An enforceable agreement requires that parties to 23 it “manifest mutual assent” to its terms. Berman v. Freedom Fin. Network, LLC, 30 F.4th 24 849, 855 (9th Cir. 2022) (analyzing California and New York law). A party may 25 manifest their assent, including to an online agreement, through conduct rather than 26 express written or oral consent. Id. at 855–56

27 The parties here agree that California contract law applies to the Court’s analysis.
28 Doc. No. 13-1 at 13 n.4; Doc. No. 16 at 10. The parties also agree as to the webpage’s

1 appearance. When subscribing to Yippee TV as Plaintiff did, potential subscribers are 2 directed to a webpage on which they are prompted to enter their payment information and 3 click a button labeled “Start Subscription.” Doc. No. 13-2 at 19; Doc. No. 16-1 at 4. The 4 page contains a hyperlink to Vimeo’s Terms and Conditions, titled “Terms of Service” in

Doc No. 13-2 at 19 (“Def. Fig. B”); see also Doc. No. 16-1 at 4 (“Pl. Fig. A”).

1 The parties contest whether, by clicking the “Start Subscription” button, Plaintiff 2 assented to the Vimeo Terms of Service. The scheme for assessing mutual assent to 3 online terms and services agreements is complex and often hinges on a webpage’s 4 format, which come in various types. A “browsewrap” agreement, for example, is one in 5 which “a website offers terms that are disclosed only through a hyperlink and the user 6 supposedly manifests assent to those terms simply by continuing to use the website.” Id.
7 at 846. A “clickwrap” agreement, by contrast, is one in which “a website presents users 8 with specified contractual terms on a pop-up screen and users must check a box explicitly 9 stating, ‘I agree’ in order to proceed.” Id. Recently, the Ninth Circuit and California 10 state courts have come to recognize certain “hybrid” agreements involving elements of 11 both browsewrap and clickwrap. This includes “sign-in wrap” agreements, which 12 contain a “Terms and Conditions” (or similar) hyperlink preceded or followed by 13 statements informing consumers that by completing their purchase, creating an account, 14 clicking a button, or taking some other action, they accept the terms linked. See, e.g.
15 Sellers v. JustAnswer LLC, 289 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1, 16–32 (Cal. Ct. App. 2021); Maynez v.
16 Walmart, Inc., 479 F. Supp. 3d 890, 897 (C.D. Cal. 2020); Oberstein v. Live Nation Ent., 17 Inc., 60 F.4th 505, 513 (9th Cir. 2023) (analyzing California and Massachusetts law).

18 The Yippee TV subscription page contains a hyperlink placed above the “Start 19 Subscription” button, preceded by the phrase “[b]y clicking below, you agree to our 20 Terms of Service . . . .” Def. Fig. B; Pl. Fig. A. This characteristic is the hallmark of a 21 sign-in wrap agreement. See Sellers, 289 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 21. Thus, the Court determines 22 that the Yippee agreement is a sign-in wrap agreement.

23 When analyzing sign-in wrap agreements that fall somewhere between 24 browsewrap, which courts are reluctant to enforce, and clickwrap, which courts routinely 25 enforce, a court must “analyze mutual assent under an objective-reasonableness 26 standard.” Oberstein, 60 F.4th at 513. This includes whether, through the hyperlinked 27 terms, a webpage provides consumers “reasonably conspicuous notice” of the terms and 28 conditions. Berman, 30 F.4th at 856–58. Courts employ a variety of criteria by which

1 they assess whether a website provides reasonably conspicuous notice of terms, including 2 hyperlink font size, color, prominence within the webpage, obviousness, and other 3 indicators that “ensure that [the hyperlink] is sufficiently ‘set apart’ from the surrounding 4 text.” Id.; see also Cavanaugh v. Fanatics, LLC, No. 1:22-CV-01085 JLT SAB, --- 5 F. Supp. 3d ---- 2024 WL 3202567 at *5 (E.D. Cal. Jun. 26, 2024).

6 The Court must also, however, consider the context of a transaction, to determine 7 whether a user would, under the circumstances, “contemplate[] some sort of continuing 8 relationship” that would make them more likely to scrutinize the page for contractual 9 terms. Oberstein, 60 F.4th at 516 (citing Sellers, 289 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 29); Keebaugh 10 v. Warner Bros. Ent. Inc., 100 F.4th 1005, 1020 (9th Cir. 2024). In transactions which 11 contemplate a continuing relationship, courts are more inclined to enforce hyperlinked 12 agreements. See id. at 1020; B.D. v. Blizzard Ent., Inc., 292 Cal. Rptr. 3d 47, 64 (Cal. Ct.
13 App. 2022).

14 First, the Court finds that the context of Plaintiff’s subscription purchase would 15 lead a consumer to contemplate at least some limited form of ongoing relationship.
16 Defendant provides “faith-based” shows on a subscription basis. Compl. ¶¶ 18, 22.
17 These subscriptions are offered in increments of one month or one year. Id. ¶ 22. This 18 subscription-based model implies that a user must act to renew their subscription to 19 continue their use when their original subscription expires (or, in the case of automatic 20 renewal, to cancel their subscription when no longer wanted), and thus represents a more 21 continuing, interactive, relationship than making a one-time purchase. Keebaugh, 100 22 F.4th at 1020; Blizzard Ent., Inc., 292 Cal. Rptr. 3d. at 61–2. Likewise, one would expect 23 to have, and exercise, ongoing access to Defendant’s content via its app or webpage 24 throughout the subscription period. See Keebaugh, 100 F.4th at 1020; Blizzard Ent., Inc., 25 292 Cal. Rptr. 3d 47, 61–2 (Cal. Ct. App. 2022); see also Ghazizadeh v. Coursera, Inc., -- 26 - F. Supp. 3d ---- No. 23-CV-05646-EJD, 2024 WL 3455255 at *5–10 (N.D. Cal. Jun. 20, 27 2024) (analyzing a similar platform offering access to online classes). However, this 28 relationship is not necessarily akin to creating an account or profile in which one will

1 make subsequent, subsidiary purchases or transactions during use, like a video game or 2 app with in-game purchases. See, e.g., Keebaugh, 100 F.4th at 1020; Blizzard Ent., Inc., 3 292 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 52, 61–65. Additionally, the Court notes the similarity between 4 Defendant’s subscription model and the subscription service in Sellers v. JustAnswer, 5 LLC to a referral site for medical professionals. See Sellers, 289 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 6.
6 Therefore, the Court finds that a consumer would anticipate at least a limited ongoing 7 relationship based upon their subscription. This weighs in favor of finding Defendant’s 8 sign-in wrap agreement enforceable.

9       However, the Court must still analyze the hyperlink’s visual placement to 10 determine whether it is sufficiently conspicuous to put a “reasonably prudent” user on 11 notice. Keebaugh, 100 F.4th at 1019; Oberstein, 60 F.4th 516 (quoting Berman, 30 F.4th 12 at 857). Ultimately, the Court concludes that Defendant did not provide Plaintiff with 13 sufficient notice. While the “Terms of Service” hyperlink appears in blue font against a 14 white background—a characteristic to which many courts look—the font is not 15 underlined nor completely capitalized and is small in proportion to most of the text on the 16 page. See Berman, 30 F.4th at 857; Colgate v. JUUL Labs, Inc., 402 F. Supp. 3d 728, 17 765 (N.D. Cal. 2019). Likewise, the “Terms of Service” hyperlink comes in a sequence 18 of three hyperlinks (albeit separated by black-font commas), and it is not immediately 19 clear whether these lead to different, or the same, webpages. Further, though located near 20 the “Start Subscription” button, it is within an eight-line paragraph, all in font smaller 21 than that on the page generally. See Burzdak v. Universal Screen Arts, Inc., No. 21-CV-22 02148-EMC, 2021 WL 3621830 at *6 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 16, 2021) (comparing cases); 23 Sadlock v. Walt Disney Co., No. 22-CV-09155-EMC, 2023 WL 4869245 at *10 (N.D.
24 Cal. Jul. 31, 2023). Additionally, the page contains promotional material displaying 25 emoticon illustrations and self-promotional statements, which draw a viewer’s attention 26 away from the hyperlink. Id. Finally, this webpage contains a second hyperlink labeled 27 “Terms of Service” below the “Start Subscription” button. Def. Fig. B; Pl. Fig. A. While 28 the text above this hyperlink informs the user that it redirects them to Google’s terms of 1 service—which apparently also apply—a second hyperlink with the same name and 2 similar placement as the one in question only further draws the viewer’s attention and 3 may cause confusion. Cf. Colgate, 402 F. Supp. 3d at 765. These features weigh against 4 a finding that the webpage adequately put Plaintiff on notice.

5         Similar recent cases are instructive. For example, the court in Cavanaugh rejected 6 a hyperlink on a membership registration page that contained informational fields stacked 7 vertically upon a “Create an Account,” under which is a sentence stating, in gray, “[b]y 8 signing up, you agree to our Terms of Use and Privacy Policy.” 2024 WL 3202567 at *2, 9 *5 (E.D. Cal. Jun. 26, 2024). Reviewing the “Create an Account” page reproduced 10 therein, that hyperlink is more conspicuous in many characteristics:<sup>2</sup> the page is less 11 cluttered, the font size is of more similar size to the general text, and the page layout is 12 entirely vertical, drawing attention down a single line. Nevertheless, the court held this 13 hyperlink was insufficiently conspicuous. Id. at *5. The Court finds this case analogous 14 in transactional context, as the plaintiff in Cavanaugh encountered this hyperlink while 15 making an account through which he would place at least six purchases, indicating the 16 expectation of an ongoing relationship—at least regarding the Cavanaugh plaintiff’s 17 expectations at the “Create an Account” stage. Id. at *3. The Cavanaugh court later 18 considered the fact that the plaintiff repeatedly used his account to make purchases on the 19 defendant’s website, at each instance encountering another hyperlinked terms and 20 conditions. Id. at *7–8. Colgate v. JUUL Labs, Inc., decided earlier, presents facts 21 similar to Cavanaugh’s “Create an Account” page, with the same results. See Colgate, 22 402 F. Supp. 3d at 763–66.

23         The Court likewise notes differences between the facts here and cases from district 24 courts in the Ninth Circuit in which courts found a hyperlink to terms and conditions 25 sufficiently conspicuous. In these cases, unlike here, hyperlinks generally appear on 26 simple, uncluttered webpages, in text of one sentence or little more, with few, if any, 27

28 <sup>2</sup> Though, the Court notes, not font color.

1 additional hyperlinks around them. See, e.g., Nail v. Lens.com, Inc., No. 2:24-CV-02531-
2 SB-E, 2024 WL 3723912 at *4 (C.D. Cal. Jun. 20, 2024); Ghazizadeh, 2024 WL
3 3455255 at *5–10, *14; Pizarro v. QuinStreet, Inc., No. 22-CV-02803-MMC, 2022 WL 4 3357838 at *3 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 15, 2022) (“the general design of the webpage, which is 5 comprised of only two data fields, is relatively uncluttered and has a muted, and 6 essentially uniform, color scheme.”).

7 Considering the entirety of the subscription page and the context of Plaintiff’s 8 relationship with Defendant, the hyperlink here did not sufficiently put Plaintiff on notice
9 of the agreement—especially given the California state courts’ tendency to shift the onus 10 of creating clarity onto website creators. See Sellers, 289 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16–32. Thus, the 11 Court finds there is no enforceable arbitration agreement, and the Court need not examine 12 subsidiary questions of arbitrability or whether, had such agreement existed, Defendant 13 would have a right to enforce it.

14 IV. CONCLUSION

15 For the foregoing reasons, the Court DENIES Defendant’s motion to compel 16 arbitration.
