STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. DODD (for himself, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. BROWN, Mrs.

MURRAY, Mr. SANDERS, and Mrs. CLINTON):

S. 2895. A bill to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to maintain eligibility, for Federal PLUS loans, of borrowers who are 90 or more days delinquent on mortgage loan payments, or for whom foreclosure proceedings have been initiated, with respect to their primary residence; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today with Senator KENNEDY, Senator BROWN, Senator MURRAY, Senator SANDERS, and Senator CLINTON to introduce the PLUS Loan Borrower Protection Act of 2008. This bill is designed to ensure that students and parents can get access to PLUS Loans even if they have been caught up in the subprime mortgage crisis.

In recent months there have been indications that students may face a challenge getting access to some Federal Stafford loans and private education loans because of the growing credit crisis in the financial markets. While I am unaware of an instance to date when a student has been unable to secure a loan, the withdrawal of certain lenders, the ongoing turmoil in U.S. credit markets and the absence of liquidity in the student loan market have fueled concerns that a potential student loan credit crunch may be looming. One which could leave millions of students in a last-minute dash to secure the financial assistance they need to attend college this academic year.

Last week I held a hearing in the Senate Banking Committee to examine this issue and consider how to address this situation. Based on what I heard in that hearing I have contacted Treasury Secretary Paulson and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Bernanke to urge each of them to utilize all existing tools, including options allowing federally-backed and AAA-rated private student loans to be used as collateral at the Fed's temporary secured lending facility, TSLF, and using the Federal Financing Bank under Treasury to help prime the pump of liquidity, in order to help avert a funding crisis in the student loan market. I have also cosponsored the Strengthening Student Aid for All Act to bring stability and certainty to several Federal financial aid programs. Sen. KENNEDY took the lead in introducing that legislation and I am proud to support him.

But during the hearing another element of this issue came to my attention—Federal PLUS loans. PLUS loans are supposed to be available to individuals who do not meet the financial needs tests of other Federal financial aid programs. But current law and regulation prevent individuals who have been more than 90 days delinquent on a mortgage payment or who have gone through a foreclosure within the previous 5 years from getting a PLUS loan. Normally that is a good standard to have—it helps ensure that individuals do not get themselves so much into debt that they cannot get out. But with our recent history in the subprime mortgage market and the ensuing credit crisis, this requirement can have a much broader and more damaging result—denying college education to the next generation. Individuals who may need PLUS loans more than ever this fall because other sources of aid and lending may be unavailable, might be denied this aid because of the mismanagement of our housing market. This is unacceptable.

Ensuring that students have available and affordable access to a college education should be among our highest priorities. Our world is growing more complex by the day. Never has higher education been more crucial to the success of our people and our country. Today, 60 percent of the new jobs being created by our economy require at least some post-secondary education. Compare that to a half-century ago, when only 15 per cent of new jobs required some amount of college. If our children are to achieve their highest aspirations, and if our Nation's economic backbone is to continue to remain strong, then we must ensure that the doors of higher education remain open for all who have the desire and ability to walk through them.

That is why we are introducing the PLUS Loan Borrower Protection Act of 2008 today. It would eliminate delinquency and foreclosures during this tumultuous time from being a disqualifying factor in awarding PLUS loans. Lenders would still be able to make judgments about the credit of a PLUS loan borrower on the basis of other parts of their credit history. But if the only mark against a borrower is being caught up in the current mortgage crisis, the lender could not disqualify them. Given the current upheaval in our economy, this is a simple and necessary step to make sure our children can still get a needed education.

As the Congress moves to address access to student loans and the current credit crisis, I will work to include this bill in our response. I want to thank Senators KENNEDY, BROWN, MURRAY, SANDERS, and CLINTON for joining with me on this bill and I urge my other colleagues to cosponsor this important legislation and join me in this effort.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2895

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

Mr. BIDEN (for himself, Mr. LUGAR, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. OBAMA, and Mr. MCCAIN) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 523

Whereas, prior to the Bucharest Summit in April 2008, the Government of Georgia and the Government of Ukraine each expressed the desire to join the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), have committed their countries to programs of reforms consistent with membership in the Euro-Atlantic community, and have worked consistently for membership in NATO; and

Whereas, in April 2008 at the Bucharest Summit, the assembled leaders of NATO issued the following statement: “NATO welcomes Ukraine’s and Georgia’s Euro-Atlantic aspirations for membership in NATO. We agreed today that these countries will become members of NATO. Both nations have made valuable contributions to Alliance operations. We welcome the democratic reforms in Ukraine and Georgia and look forward to free and fair parliamentary elections in Georgia in May. MAP is the next step for Ukraine and Georgia on their direct way to membership. Today we make clear that we support these countries’ applications for MAP. Therefore we will now begin a period of intensive engagement with both at a high political level to address the questions still outstanding pertaining to their MAP applications. We have asked Foreign Ministers to make a first assessment of progress at their December 2008 meeting. Foreign Ministers have the authority to decide on the MAP applications of Ukraine and Georgia.”: Now, therefore, be it

(3) Congress supports the goals and ideals of National Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month 2008.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about a resolution Senator SPECTER and I have introduced supporting the goals and ideals of National Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month, which occurs this month of April.

In the U.S. a person is sexually assaulted on average every two and a half minutes. One in six women and one in 33 men have been victims of rape or attempted rape. According to the Department of Justice, 191,670 people in the United States were sexually assaulted in 2005. These are disturbing statistics.

National Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month serves many valuable purposes. It provides a special opportunity to educate people about sexual violence and increase public awareness about the impact of this crime that changes many lives forever and sometimes irrevocably.

It pays tribute to the many survivors of sexual violence and honors their compassionate efforts to help others in the face of their own anguish. Many courageous individuals, themselves survivors of sexual assault, rise above their own suffering to help assuage the pain of others and assist in the prevention of sexual assault.

This resolution also recognizes and applauds the work of community organizations and other supporters who help survivors and promote prevention and awareness. These are important and vital services in the lives not only of those who have been assaulted but all of us. Increasing public awareness helps in the fight to prevent sexual assault and reduce the number of people who are sexually assaulted, saving those individuals from the nightmare others know all too well.

Sexual violence is a crime we must all work to eradicate. While women comprise the majority of victims, this crime is perpetrated against women, children, and men. It is my goal that this resolution helps us to understand our role in assisting these individuals and preventing this crime from happening in the future.

I ask all my colleagues to support this important resolution and encourage communities across our country to pay tribute to all those whose lives have been touched by sexual assault and those who have dedicated their lives to work to end it.
