

for all the people in my State who are working hard and playing by the rules and just want the credit card companies to do the same.

We cannot forget that the ultimate goal of reviving our economy is to make it possible for people in this country—who have worked hard, done everything right, paid their bills, and gotten these credit card bills—to get ahead. This bipartisan legislation, which I cosponsored, will end the unfair practices that have been going on too long for Main Street families, so they can keep more of their hard-earned money.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

JUSTICE SANDRA DAY O'CONNOR

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I just left a ceremony in the Hart Office Building, not far from where we are meeting, which is an annual event where the University of Illinois presents the Senator Paul H. Douglas Ethics in Government Award. The 2008 recipient is former Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. She is the first woman to be so honored.

There has been a long list of public servants who have distinguished themselves with their integrity and their show of ethics in government who have been acknowledged for this award, and Justice Sandra Day O'Connor certainly follows in that tradition.

It was my good fortune as a young college student to work as an intern in the office of Senator Paul Douglas. It truly shaped my life and convinced me that public service was a good calling, and I was lucky, as I have said many times, to be inspired by the gospels of St. Paul—that would be former Senator Paul Douglas and former Senator Paul Simon—who showed me what I thought was the very best in public service in their honesty—not only dollar honesty but honesty on the issues. It is a great honor for me to continue and serve in the same Senate seat that both of these men occupied.

But today the University of Illinois honored Sandra Day O'Connor, and she is well deserving—the first woman to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court. By the time her career was coming to a close, she became one of the most decisive forces on that High Court. During her last decade on the Court, 193 decisions were made by the Court by a vote of 5 to 4. One Justice's vote made the difference, and in 148 of those 193 cases, that one vote was cast by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

There were so many issues—issues regarding privacy, the rights of people with disabilities, affirming the voting rights of Americans, preserving the rights of universities to use affirmative action, protecting the rights established under McCain-Feingold to have cleaner elections in America, upholding State laws giving individuals their rights under health insurance contracts, preserving the authority of the Federal Government to protect the environment, banning the execution of children, reaffirming America's time-honored tradition of separation of church and state.

One New York Times reporter wrote in 2001 that Justice O'Connor's vote tipped the scale so often that “we are all living now in Sandra Day O'Connor's America.”

As I said a few moments ago in introducing her at this gathering, one of her most significant and oft-quoted opinions was a recent one—her landmark decision in Hamdi v. Rumsfeld, in which she famously wrote:

A state of war is not a blank check for the President when it comes to the rights of a Nation's citizens.

Mr. President, I wanted to come to the floor briefly today to add my voice to so many Americans in gratitude to Sandra Day O'Connor for her great service to Arizona and to the United States of America and to the Supreme Court. I am glad her voice is still strong and part of the public chorus, calling on us to be better as a people and better in government.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the speech I gave during the awards ceremony.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REMARKS BY ASSISTANT SENATE MAJORITY LEADER RICHARD J. DURBIN CONGRATULATING JUSTICE SANDRA DAY O'CONNOR ON RECEIVING THE 2008 SENATOR PAUL H. DOUGLAS ETHICS IN GOVERNMENT AWARD

I would like to acknowledge University of Illinois President Joseph White, Chairman Shah and members of the University of Illinois Board of Trustees; Robert Rich and the staff of the Institute of Government and Public Affairs; and members of the Douglas family.

I also want to acknowledge the members of the Douglas Senate family—those of us who had the good fortune to have worked for Paul Douglas in the Senate and whose hearts and minds and lives were enlarged by his example.

Sadly, there is one important member of the Douglas Senate family who is missing this year. Paul Douglas lost the use of his left arm when it was smashed to pieces in Okinawa in World War II. But he gained another strong right arm when he and Howard Shuman joined forces in the United States Senate. On the Civil Rights Act, the Voting Rights Act and so many important battles, Howard Shuman truly was Paul Douglas' “right hand man.” We are all free-er because of their partnership. It's good to see Howard's daughter Ellen and other members of the Shuman family here today.

We are here today to celebrate a woman whose courage, character and wisdom helped preserve many of the same principles that Paul Douglas spent his life fighting to protect and enlarge. It is an honor to join you in recognizing Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

Before I say a few words about Justice O'Connor, I want to acknowledge another person whose wisdom and integrity has served our nation so well—Supreme Court Justice David Souter.

Thank you, Justice Souter, for your many years of service to our nation and our Constitution. Your voice on the Court has made a difference.

Someone asked me once where I found my political inspiration.

I said, “Most of it comes from the gospel of St. Paul.” Paul Douglas. And another brilliant and compassionate statesman, Paul Simon. Much of what I know that is good and important about politics, I learned from them.

Paul Simon once said that the test for a Supreme Court nominee is not where he or she stands on a given issue. The real test is: Will this Justice use his or her power on the Court to restrict freedom, or expand it?

Justice O'Connor and Justice Souter, you have both scored high grades on the Paul Simon test. Our nation is better for your service. And we are grateful to you.

If the man or woman President Obama nominates to serve as America's next Supreme Court Justice is as independent, open-minded and fair as the two of you—and I feel confident they will be—our country and our Constitution will be in good hands.

And now, regarding our guest of honor. What can you give a woman who has already been inducted into the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame?

It took 190 years and 101 male Justices before Sandra Day O'Connor broke the gender barrier on the United States Supreme Court. It took only 14 years and 16 male recipients for Justice O'Connor to become the first woman recipient of the Paul Douglas Ethics in Government Award. That is progress.

Paul Douglas is most closely associated with the civil rights movement. But he was a true egalitarian. He believed in equality of opportunity for all people. And he greatly admired strong, intelligent women.

He kept a series of photographs in his office. One was a photo of one of his political heroes, Jane Addams, the great social reformer from Chicago whom he first met in 1921.

My first introduction to Jane Addams was that 1966 campaign. We started off by making a visit to Freeport to lay flowers on the grave of Jane Addams.

I think it would make Senator Douglas quite proud to see an award bearing his name presented to a woman who has done so much to advance the causes of equal justice and equal opportunity, which were so dear to him.

There are some strong similarities between Senator Douglas and Justice O'Connor.

He grew up in the Maine woods. She grew up on a ranch in the high desert on the Arizona-New Mexico border. It was in those isolated environments of their childhoods that they both developed a lifelong love of reading and learning.

(Of course, life on the Lazy B Ranch wasn't all books and reading. By the time she was 8 years old, Justice O'Connor could drive a truck ... mend a fence ... brand cattle ... and shoot her own .22 caliber rifle. She had cowboys for friends and a bobcat for a playmate—good preparation for all those Supreme Court conferences.)

Another, more important similarity between Senator Douglas and Justice O'Connor is their shared distrust of ideology.

Here is a fact about Paul Douglas that many people do now know. His first foray into elected politics was running for mayor of Chicago as a Republican. He was elected to the Board of Alderman as an Independent. It wasn't until he first ran for the Senate that he aligned himself with the Democratic Party.

Justice O'Connor's ability to see beyond partisan divides was reflected early when every member of the Senate Judiciary Committee—from Strom Thurmond to Ted Kennedy—voted to support her nomination. And it grew over her 24 years on the Court.

Their mutual commitment to principle rather than political ideologies enabled both Paul Douglas and Sandra Day O'Connor to build coalitions to advance our nation's common good. And for that, we are very grateful.

Here is another similarity: As a member of the Arizona state Senate, Sandra Day O'Connor once introduced an amendment to remove a misplaced comma from a bill.

As a college intern, I sat next to Senator Douglas many nights as he read, and edited, and signed every single letter that went out under his name. Because he couldn't use his left arm, it was my job to pull the letters off the top of the pile as he finished them. Believe me, no misplaced comma ever escaped his editing pen, either.

But the most important similarity—the reason we are all here today—is because, like Paul Douglas, Justice O'Connor used the power she was given to defend and expand our freedom. With her voice and her vote, she said—time and time again—that government has an obligation to defend the powerless from the powerful.

Justice O'Connor was always open to those who could make a strong case. She listened to the arguments and weighed the evidence.

During her last decade on the Court, 193 decisions were decided by a vote of 5-to-4. One Justice's vote made the difference. And in 148 of those 193 cases, that one vote was cast by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

She cast the fifth and deciding vote safeguarding Americans' right to privacy; requiring that courtrooms be accessible to people with disabilities; affirming the obligation of states to protect the voting rights of minorities; and preserving the rights of universities to use affirmative action programs.

Justice O'Connor cast the deciding vote preserving the right of the federal government under the McCain-Feingold law to place reasonable restrictions on campaign contributions so that special interest money can't gain overwhelm our democracy—a vote, I think, that Senator Douglas would have applauded.

She cast the deciding vote upholding state laws giving individuals the right to a second doctor's opinion if their HMO denies them treatment; preserving the authority of the federal government to protect the environment; banning the execution of children in America; and reaffirming America's time-honored tradition of separation of church and state.

Indeed, as a New York Times reporter wrote in 2001, Justice O'Connor's vote tipped the scales so often that—quote, “we are all living now in Sandra Day O'Connor's America.”

And that was before what is perhaps her most significant opinion: the landmark decision of Hamdi v. Rumsfeld, in which Justice O'Connor famously wrote: “A state of war is not a blank check for the President when it comes to the rights of the Nation's citizens.”

It strikes me as ironic that Sandra Day O'Connor could have grown up in a place called the Lazy B Ranch because lazy is about the last word you could ever use to describe her. Since leaving the Court nearly four years ago, she has written and spoken extensively. She has been especially eloquent and courageous in speaking out in defense of an independent judiciary.

In 2005, she wrote an op-ed for the Wall Street Journal about those who seek to score political points by railing against and trying to intimidate what they call “activist federal judges.”

She warned that “using judges as punching bags presents a grave threat to the independent judiciary.” She added: “We must be more vigilant in making sure that criticism does not cross over into intimidation ... that the current mood of cynicism does not end up compromising the rule of law.”

For all she has done to advance the cause of equal justice and equal opportunity in America, and for her continued defense of our courts and our Constitution, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor is a true American she-ro and a worthy recipient of the Paul Douglas Ethics in Government Award. Thank you again, Justice O'Connor, for your selfless service to our nation.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Presiding Officer for this time.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

SPECIALIST ADAM KULIGOWSKI

Mrs. SHAHEEN. Madam President, I wish to express my sympathy over the loss of Army SPC Adam Kuligowski, a 21-year-old from Derry, NH. Kuligowski died on April 6, 2009 in Bagram, Afghanistan. Specialist Kuligowski was a signals intelligence analyst assigned to the Special Troops Battalion, 101st Airborne Division.

Specialist Kuligowski grew up in Derry, NH, and attended Gilbert H. Hood Middle School and Pinkerton Academy. He had lived all over the world including South Korea, Saudi Arabia, Nigeria, Honduras, and Utah, before he enlisted in the military in October 2006. Specialist Kuligowski had been in Afghanistan for about a year and was scheduled to return home this summer.

Specialist Kuligowski served with honor and distinction throughout his young military career, earning the National Defense Service Medal, the Afghanistan Campaign Medal, the Global War on Terrorism Service Medal, the Army Service Ribbon and the NATO Medal. New Hampshire is proud of Specialist Kuligowski's service to and sacrifice for our country. He, and the thousands of brave men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces serving today, deserve America's highest honor and recognition.

Specialist Kuligowski is survived by his parents, Michael and Tracie Kuligowski of Derry, his grandparents, Stanley and Phyllis Kuligowski, two brothers and a sister. He will be missed dearly by all those who knew him.

I ask my colleagues to join me and all Americans in honoring U.S. Army Specialist Adam Kuligowski.

SPECIALIST CRAIG R. HAMILTON

Madam President, I wish to express my sympathy over the loss of U.S. Army SPC Craig R. Hamilton, a 35-year-old native of Nashua, NH. Specialist Hamilton died on March 27 at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, TX.

Born in Nashua in 1974, Specialist Hamilton was raised and educated in nearby Milford. After graduating from Milford High School in 1992, he joined the U.S. Marine Corps, rising to the rank of corporal before being honorably discharged in 1996. Hamilton spent 11 years back home in Milford before deciding to once again serve his country by enlisting in the U.S. Army in 2007. He was assigned to Fort Sam Houston where he was recovering from a shoulder injury.

New Hampshire is proud of Specialist Hamilton's service to and sacrifice for our country. His decision to reenlist in the U.S. Army following his time in the Marine Corps demonstrates a deep commitment to duty and service for which his country will forever be grateful. He, and the thousands of brave men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces serving today, deserve America's highest honor and recognition.

Specialist Hamilton is survived by his wife Stacey; his father and stepmother Chuck and Kathy Hamilton; his mother Karen Hamilton; and his brothers Jon and Adam. He will be missed dearly by all those who knew him.

I ask my colleagues to join me and all Americans in honoring U.S. Army SPC Craig Hamilton.

CELEBRATING TUNISIAN AMERICAN DAY

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, I ask my colleagues to join me in celebrating Tunisian American Day on May 27. This annual celebration is in recognition of the many contributions that Tunisian Americans have made to enrich our culture and society.

The United States has maintained diplomatic relations with Tunisia for more than two centuries. On March 26, 1799, the first agreement of friendship and trade was concluded between the United States and Tunisia. The first American consulate was established in Tunis, the Tunisian capital, on January 20, 1800. On May 17, 1956, the United States was the first major power to recognize the sovereign state of Tunisia. Throughout the years, the United States and Tunisia have forged an amicable and enduring relationship that is based on a common commitment to the ideals of democracy and liberty.

Currently, there are more than 13,500 Americans of Tunisian descent residing in the United States. The Tunisian American community has made invaluable contributions to improving our cultural diversity by sharing their proud heritage and rich cultural traditions.

As Tunisian Americans gather to celebrate Tunisian American Day, I wish them a joyous and inspiring day and thank them for their contributions to cultural diversity.
